PREFACE

A FEW words of explanation from the editor may seem called for in view of the amount of material, especially under the letters A-G, contained in this Supplement. As already mentioned in the Preliminary Notice to Parts I and II of the Dictionary and in the Preface to the Dictionary itself most of the work under A-F was printed before Dr. Bosworth's death; and much of that under G was mistakenly supposed to have been completed for the press. It is not then surprising that considering the advance made during the last fifty years in all that relates to the study of Old English a revisal of the earlier part of the Dictionary should call for large additions or alterations. In the case of the material under the letters from G to the end it is hoped that the need for an apology is less as is certainly the excuse for one.

The thanks of the editor are specially due to Dr. Henry Bradley for very many and very helpful comments and suggestions: to the late Professor A. S. Napier for advance and separate copies of articles connected with lexicography: and to Dr. Max Förster of Leipzig for help of the same kind. He must also acknowledge his obligations to the late Professor Cosijn, at the sale of whose library the Delegates of the Clarendon Press purchased copies of the first and second editions of Bosworth's Dictionary and of Grein's Sprachschatz. In these Professor Cosijn had noted passages to illustrate many words; and though the editor had often already made the same note, this was not always the case, and he acknowledges an obligation where it is too late to offer thanks.

and-bician; p. ode To make signs to:—Hleōdriende andbēcniað ciebat, Wrt. Voc. ii, 21, 50.

and-bida, -bidan. v. and-bita, an-bidan.

and-bita. Substitute:—Andbita, beorma azyma, Wrt. Voc. ii, 9, 5. Andbita, beorma (v. Mk. 14, 1), 74, 26. [Cf. O. H. Ger. int-pizzun refecerunt: im-piz refectio, prandium.] Cf. on-bitan.

and-cwepan (þ). This form seems to be given as an alternative to widercweðan, as a gloss to frustrari, contra dicere, Hpt. Gl. 491, 32. [Cf. Goth. and-kwipan: O. Sax. ant-queðan: O. H. Ger. ant-queðan.]

v. and-cwiss, on-cwepan.

and-cýpness, e; f. Experience:—Hē wilnade þætte eall seō þeod þe hē fore wæs mid þære gife ðæs crīstan geleafan gelæred wære, þæs geleafan oncýduessu (7-, v. l.) hē swiðust onfeng on sigegeothum ellreordra cynna desiderans totam, cui praesesse coepit, gentem fidei Christianae gratia inbut, cuius experimenta permaxima in expugnandis barbaris ceperat, Bd. 3, 3; Sch. 199, 5. [Cf. O. H. Ger. ant-kundi expertus.] Cf. un-andcýpigness.

and-eāw. Dele bracket, and add: ostentatious (? cf. eāwan, iwan to shew, and Goth. and-augjo openly):—Ælc andeāw omnis arrogans, Scint. 151, 17. Andeāwe weras arrogantes uiri, 152, 12. Andeāwum arroganiibus, 221, 8.

and-efn. Substitute: and-ef(e)n (v. evene in N. E. D.), e; pl. -ef(e)nu; f. Measure:—Neah andefene prope modum, Wrt. Voc. ii, 66, 73.

I. of persons, quality, capacity, nature:—For ðære ungelincesse ðāra hiéromonna sculun beon ungelic ðā word ðæs lareowes, ðæt hē hiene selfne geðeode to eallum his hiéromonnum, to æghwelcum be his andefne (-efene, v. l.) pro qualitate audientium formari debet sermo doctorum, ut ad sua singulis congruat, Past. 175, 4. Dōð ge cōwrum monnum ðæt lice be hira andefne (-efene, v. l.), 203, 1. Ælc gescaft is to ārīanne be hire andefne, and symle siō hēhste swiþost, Bt. 32, 2; F. 116, 14. andel-bære (=and-hæl-bære; cf. Icel. 'and-hæli, n. monstrosity; medic. the heels being in the place of the toes, and hælis-lygr absurd.' Cl. & V. Dict.); adj. Reversed, inverted:—Andelbærrē tide tempore prepostora (id est, vernali non autumnali, Ald. 33, 12), An. Ox. 7, 282; 8, 207. Andelbære, 2, 257; 4, 74; Hpt. Gl. 496, 42; Angl. xiii. 35, 218 (all are glosses on the same passage).

andergilde:—Ne weorde ðe næfre tō þæs wā ðæt dū ne wēne betran andergilde, Prov. K. 41. In the passage given under un-andergilde (q. v.), hwæt unandergildes should render quod non vilescat; this would make andergilde; adj. = of little value, for which little is paid. Such a force for ander- might perhaps be supported by the glosses andran, andran in vanum given in Heyne's Altniederdeutsche Denkmäler. Andergilde in the proverb might thus mean at little cost, without effort (?), and the proverb be translated: Never let it get so bad with you that you don't hope for something better by things righting themselves.

andēt. Add.: [Goth. anda-hait confession: O. H. Ger. ant-heiz professio.]

andēt-nes. Add.:—Durh ondetnesse, Past. 367, 6. Wē byddað þe þ þū sylle andetnyse Gode, Nic. 10, 28. Mid andetnessum eallra þæra mæra, Hml. S. 25, 505. v. ge-andetnes.

andēt(t)a. Substitute. The word seems indeclinable and to be used only in the phrase beón (wesan, weorþan) andetta = to admit a charge, liability, &c., (1) with gen.:—Gielde sē þæs sleges andetta siē wer and wite let him that admits the slaying (acknowledges that he slew the man) pay 'wer' and 'wite', Ll. Th. i. 80, 7. Ic þe eom andetta mīna synna, Angl. xiii. 501, 15. Ic þe eom andetta bōte I admit to thee my liability to make amends, 501, 17, 23. Donne cūæd sē bīscop and ðara hīna wīotan þet hīo hīm nēran mīran ondeta (that they did not admit to hīm liability for more) þoune hit ærædd wæs on Æðelbaldes dæge, Cht. Th. 70, 25. Heó him tō spræcon ymbe þ land, þ hē his hīm geulde; ða wæs hē ondeta þ hē swā walde he admitted that he was willing to do so, Cht. Th. 47, 18. þū hæbbe forgitan þæt dū ær andetta wære þ þū wisse, Shr. 191, 26. [O. H. Ger. ant-heiz(z)o; ih in antheizo uard.]

andettan. Add.: andēt(t)ian:—Heó andette fatebatur, Wrt. Voc. ii. 34, 48. I. to confess what one has done wrong:—Hē andette and cwæð, 'Sōðlice ic syn gode', Jos. 7, 20. II. to confess, admit the truth of a charge, unfavourable statement, &c.:—Ic andette þæt hī cōmon tō mē fatear, venerunt ad me, Jos. 2, 4. III. to confess a person (v. andettere), acknowledge excellence in something:—Ælc ðæra ðe mē andet ætoran mannum, ic andette hīne ætoran nīnum fæder, Hml. Th. ii. 558, 27. Ondettigad heofenas wundur ðin, Ps. Srt. 88, 6.

IV. to make acknowledgement of a benefit to a person, to give thanks, praise to:—Þeús Drihtne andette and be hīm spræc, Lk. 2, 38. Ondettigen ðe (tibi) folc, ondettien ðe folc, Ps. Srt. 66, 4. Ondette (-ie), 6. Onditien Drihtne wundur his bearnum monna oh that men would praise the Lord for his wonderful works to the children of men, 106, 31.

V. to confess a purpose, to promise, vow:—Wæs hē swā swýþe onbryrð, þæt hē andette Gode, gif hē hīm ðæs mergendæges geunnan wolde, þæt hē his þeow beón wolde, Guth. 14, 27. [Goth. and-haitan to confess, profess.] v. un-andet.

andettend, es; m. A confessor:—Fergef ondettendum (or ptclp.?) ignoscere confitentibus, Ps. Srt. ii. p. 203, 37.

andēt(t)ere. Add.:—On ðone .V. an dæg þæs mōndes biþ ðæs Godes andetteres tid Scti Quinti, Shr. 126, 11. Ondetteres, Rtl. 65, 6. Ondeteres, 49, 4; 88, 40. [Cf. Wo is him þat uel wif bryngeþ to his cotlíf (cf. wif hom bryngeþ, 265), Misc. 118, 259.]

II. in the charters of Edward the Confessor the word seems used in the sense of manor; the places to which it is applied are in the possession of individuals, and have landed property belonging to them; they are in almost every case the subjects of grant to the church. Thus the brethren of Westminster have 'ðat cotlíf Aðgude and ale ðære þuge ðe ðærtō mid richte gebirað, mid circe and mid milne, mid wode and mid felde, mid læse and mid mæde, and on allen þugen swā ful and swā forð swā Ælfwine and his wif it firmest ahten and into ðære hālgæn stōwe gāfan,' C. D. iv. 217, 7-13. Other instances are 'ðæt cotlíf Leosne ðe Atsera ahte and bequeð . . . tō ðæra monece fōden' with all belonging to it (cf. 178), 191, 13, and 'ðæt cotlíf Meleshām ðe Leofcild ahte and bequeð,' 214, 6. In like manner the king grants 'ðat cotlíf ðe ic was boren inne bi naman Giðslæpe,' 215, 31: 'ðā cotlīfe Persore (cf. loco celebri . . . qui Persoran nuncupatur uocabulo, iii. 74 . . . in Persoran . . . mansi, 75) and D(e)órhurst (cf. nomina terrarum quas dabo ad locum qui dicitur Deórhurst, i. 227) mid allen ðan landen, &c.,' 192, 6: 'ðat cotlíf Stāne (cf. cum coenobio quod Stāna uocatur, ii. 367),' 211, 25: 'ðat cotlíf Euerslea,' 204, 19. In the last case it is said 'ic bebede ðat Paðu mi meodes wrichte and UUlnōð mīn hūscarl and Ælfrice Hort and Frēbrn mīn frēosōcne men ðe ðat cotlíf healded heoneforð . . . bēn on sainte Petres wealde and ðām hirde on ðām minstre hēsumian and þewwan.'

crā the croaking sound made by frogs or crows:—Coox i. crā, vox ranarum vel corvorum, Wülck. Gl. 208, 10.

crabba. Add:—Crabba nepo, Wrt. Voc. ii. 61, 48: cancer, 128, 7. cræcettan. Substitute: cræcettan, cræcettan to crook:—Se hreīn mid openum mūde ongann cræcettan (cræcettan, v. l.) ynþutan þone hláf corvus aperto ore circa panem coepit crocitare, Gr. D. 118, 25. v. cræceting.

cracian. Substitute: To crack, sound, resound:—Cracaþ, brastlaþ crepat, i. sonat, Wrt. Voc. ii. 136, 64. Craciendum, cearciendum crepante, i. sonante, An. Ox. 31. ¶ In Ps. Th. 45, 3 for cracode apparently should be read cwacode (v. Angl. vi. 133), but the former seems better to give the meaning of the sonaverunt in the Latin, and to agree with the preceding clause of the English:—Ūs ðūhte for þām geþnne þæt seo eorþe eall cracode (?).
